ELKS GIVE BANQUET TO DRAFT CONTINGENT

FAREWELL DINNER GIVEN TO ROCK COUNTY BOYS WHO LEFT THIS MORNING FOR CAMP GRANT.

GOV. PHILIPP SPEAKS

State Executive Gives Stirring Address to Selected Men, Urging Them to Uphold Name of State.

Forty-six Rock county young men, including several from this city, left this morning for Camp Grant to be drafted into the United States army. The banquet and program which followed was one of the finest ever tendered any body of departing young men and great credit is due the committee in charge of the same. Covers were laid for seventy.

A four course dinner was served to the young men at six-thirty o'clock under the direction of Fred Green, chairman of the home committee. Mr. Green came into his own last evening and as one man was heard to remark: "It was the finest dinner I have ever eaten in my life." The dinner was followed by a program of music and singing. The entire dinner and gave the dinner something new in what he termed Swiss bread. The menu follows:

Oyster Cocktail
Green Peas
Individual Chicken Pie
Cheese
Cigars

The Lakota club orchestra with George Hinch playing the harp throughout the dinner and several songs which were well received, were rendered by Mr. Hatch. Waitresses from the Meyers Hotel served the dinner.

After the dinner the guests adjourned to the club rooms, where a program was given, including a stirring address by Governor Philipp. He addressed the young men as chairman of the meeting and after a short address of welcome called upon the Lakota club orchestra for a selection. They responded with "Over There." Robert Dalley then sang in his usual pleasing manner and was forced to respond to an encore.

George S. Parker then addressed the men of Rock county and the way the people of the county are standing back of the boys in the army. Mr. Parker also told the boys of his many visits to Europe and assured the young men that they would be pleased with France and that although they would get homesick at times, that it would be overcome and that they should be thankful that they are being given the privilege of going to that beautiful country. Mr. Parker paid the men a fitting tribute and stated that he was proud of them and that they must be proud of the uniform of the navy or army. Mr. Parker closed his remarks by giving the men a remedy for seasickness which will undoubtedly be of great value to them before many months pass.

M. J. Jeffers then addressed the audience, telling them of the inability of Speaker Lawrence Whitely of Madison to go to the city. He then called upon Robert Dalley for another song.

Mayor Charles L. Valentine then spoke to the men telling them of some of the hardships of the city. Mr. Valentine told of what hardships the men of "61" went through and spoke of how wounds which were deadly in those days were only minor injuries in the present time. Mr. Valentine spoke in behalf of the citizens of Janesville and the boys of the county and assured them that the citizens of Janesville were back of them and that if at any time they should want anything he requested that they ask for it and he was sure that they would get it.

Robert Dalley was then requested to sing "Over There." The House Flies Burned.

Mr. Dalley requested that the audience sing the chorus and for several minutes sang afterward the hall rang with the voices of over two hundred men.

The speaker then addressed the audience on what Wisconsin is doing in this great war. In opening the address the governor urged the men to go into the training camp in good will, with the idea of doing a good deed at all times and showed them what a great asset good humor was to a man. He then dwelt for a short time upon the German citizens of this country. He urged the people to give a German a chance before condemning him. He asked them to try and make good citizens out of them and if they then refused to do so, he stated that the federal government and have them interned. He told of how the foreigners came here to escape oppression and mainly to get away from the military rule of the United States.

The speaker told of the setting of parts of Wisconsin by German people and how they have lost times innumerable of why they came to the United States and the military rule of the German people.

Governor Philipp then related how the German Empire had grown. How it has been bred in the children from childhood that the German mind is Germany was militarism. How they have been preparing for this struggle and how the Kaiser, in his greediness has even fashioned a mad after himself. He told of what Germany has done for the civilized world. He spoke of their great colleges and how their science had assisted the world but he stated that the purpose they were working and that was to gain control of the entire world, and this would have happened eventually if the Germans had continued to go on with their idea and the United States had not entered the war.

The speaker explained to the audience the motives of the war. How the United States was not fighting for a single inch of ground or for a single point of indemnity but solely for ideals. He stated that the men were fighting to protect the rights of the people and the right of traveling the highways. He stated that the country did not want the men to give their lives for money but that they did want them to go out and fight and die if necessary, for the American ideal. The speaker then related how the boys have lived for this country during the revolutionary days. He told of how the French had given this country men, money and ships and then pointed out how ungrateful the country was if they refused to help France when she called for help. He then told of what the people of this country were doing and how some of them looked upon the war. He stated that there is only one place for an American citizen at this time and that is behind the government. He spoke to the young men in regard to their going into camp and stated that in his opinion they were very fortunate to live at such a time. He assured the young men that the American people were grateful to them and that the women of the home would be glad to have them back. He paid a fitting tribute to the fathers and mothers of the young men. He told of how it should be the proud moment of a mother's life when she watches her boy march away to war.

Governor Philipp then pleaded with the young men to take care of themselves while away from home. To watch their morals and at all times be careful of their actions. He told them of how the state of Wisconsin is watching the dependents of its men and assured the boys that any dependents of theirs would be well taken care of. He then referred to the many things that have been said about Wisconsin and the Governor stated that the only thing that was the matter with the state was that she had a few larks in her boundaries and several outside. He stated that he was proud of the state and of the support they are giving the government. He told of how Wisconsin has responded completely and promptly to every demand made by the government. He told of how surprised he was that Wisconsin as one of the leading supporters of the president.

In a burst of pride the governor told of the fine showing made by Wisconsin National Guard. He told how after the final inspection before entering federal service, he was shown one of the reports and that Wisconsin was ranked as the best of the states. He told of how the Wisconsin National Guard was the finest military organization in the United States. He spoke of the fine number of men in this state in the service and started these words when he asserted that Wisconsin had today from 20,000 to 25,000 soldiers on the firing line. He told of how the high grade of men who left this state to enter the service, how he has received letters from the commanders of Camp Grant and Camp Custer lauding the Wisconsin men.

In closing the governor urged the men to go into the camp with a smile on their faces, to work hard and at all times to obey their officers and that in the end the war would be won and Wisconsin would come to prominence in the war that is now raging in Europe.

Mr. Jeffers in behalf of the citizens of Rock County urged the boys to go to the front and do a good deed. He read a telegram which was received by the Rock County Board of Supervisors from the Associated Press at nine o'clock, telling of the progress of the German army during the fighting yesterday. The telegram was received with wild ovation and for several minutes the hall rang with the cheers of several hundred men.

WALK ERECT AT EIGHTY

Because a man or woman is old does not mean that they must walk along with a stooped back and supported with a cane. A man can be as vigorous and healthy at eighty as at twenty if he aids the organs of the body in performing their functions.

All diseases whether of a malignant or weak character tend to tear away from the body the vitality and courage in its incipient stage if you would live a happy and useful long life.

Edgerton News

Edgerton, April 30th.—What might have resulted in a serious disaster was averted last evening at the Lyric theatre when the films in the cabaret fire. A fire picture was being shown, and about two hundred people were on hand to witness it. The third reel was being run when a fire broke out in the sparks from the projector. The fire had been run. When it became known that the playhouse was on fire, the audience started a stampede for the doors, but some of the cooler heads called a halt to the fire was out, and for the audience to be seated, which restored order. Lawrence Curran, who was operating the machine, was in a perilous position until he exhausted his supply of chemicals, and was so overcome with gas that he fell from the cab to the floor and was carried out of the building. The fire was quickly extinguished, and the audience was safely out of the building.

Sales of the Friendly Forest

If you haven't guessed, who threw the stone at Old Uncle Bullfrog in the last story, I'll tell you right now. It was that bad Miller's Boy. Yes, sir, there he stood, not very far away, and as he was just going to throw another when the old gentleman frog thought it was time to take a dive, and the little rabbit thought it was time to take a hop, and Tommy Turtle to take a swim, and so on, it was out of sight down on the muddy bottom where he ate his breakfast without a thought of the Miller's Boy.

Well, after a few short hops Billy Bunny found himself in the Friendly Forest close to Timmy Chipmunk's little store, where he sold candy, carrots and lettuce sandwiches and opened his knapsack and took out a handful of carrot pennies and bought a lovely apple pie, which the little chipmunk's mother had baked the very morning. And as soon as the pie was all gone Billy Bunny hopped away and by and by came to the cave where the Big Brown Bear sold honey.

Mr. Bear was a very cross this particular morning, for the day before while he was looking over a bees' nest some of the bees had been very rude and had stung him on the nose. And in the end it was all swollen up so that he couldn't find a pocket handkerchief big enough to tickle it with, and so of course he was very miserable.

RAINBOW'S END

A NOVEL

BY BEN DEACH

Author of
"The Iron Trail," "The Spotters,"
"Heart of the Sunset," etc.

Copyright by Harper and Brothers
"He is raving," O'Reilly declared, with a sharp stare at his friend.

The girl turned loyally to her patient. "I'll believe you, Mr. Varona. I always believe everything about buried treasure. The bigger the treasure the more implicitly I believe in it. I simply adore pirates and such things; if I were a man I'd be one. Do you know, I've always been tempted to bury my money and then go look for it."

"There is no doubt that my father had a great deal of money at one time," Esteban began; "he was the richest man in the richest city of Cuba."

O'Reilly shook his head dubiously and braced his back against a tree trunk; there was a look of mild disapprobation on his face as he listened to the familiar story of Don Esteban and the slave, Sebastian. When Esteban had finished, Norine drew a deep breath.

"Oh! That lays over any story I ever heard. To think that the deeds and the jewels and everything are in the wall at this minute! Suppose somebody finds it? Norine was agitated at the thought.

"Not much chance of that. The treasure has lain there for a generation, and the story itself is almost forgotten. O'Reilly, saying, "Now, then, do you think I'm so crazy?"

O'Reilly didn't have it in his heart to say exactly what he really thought. What he more than half suspected was that some favored fancy had formed lodgment in Esteban's brain.

"It's an interesting theory," he admitted. "Anyhow, there is no danger of the treasure being uncovered very soon. Cuzco had a good look and made himself ridiculous. You'll have ample chance to do likewise when the war is over."

"You must help me find it," said Esteban. "We shall all share the fortune equally, you two, Rosa and I."

"Why should we share in it?" Norine asked.

"I owe it to you. Didn't O'Reilly rescue me from a dungeon? Haven't you nursed me back to health? Don't I owe my life to you both?"

"Nonsense! I, for one, shan't take a dollar of it."

"Oh, but you must. I insist. Nursing is a poorly paid profession. Wouldn't you like to be rich?"

"Profession! Poorly paid? Norine snorted, angrily. "As if I'd take pay!"

"As if I would accept a great service and forget it, like some miserable beggar!" Esteban replied stiffly.

O'Reilly laughed out. "Don't let's quarrel over the spoil until we get it," said he. "That's the way with all treasure-hunters. They favorably fall out and go to fighting. To avoid bloodshed, I'll agree to sell my interest cheap, for cash. My share of the famous Varona fortune going for a dollar!"

"There! He doesn't believe a word of it," Esteban said.

Norine gave an impatient shrug. "Some people wouldn't believe they were alive unless they saw their breath on a looking-glass. Goodness! How I hate a sneering skeptic, a wet blanket!"

O'Reilly rose with one arm shielding his face. "In the interest of friendship, I withdraw. A curse on these buried treasures, anyhow. We shall yet come to blows."

As he walked away he heard Norine say: "Don't pay any attention to him. We'll go and dig it up ourselves, and we won't wait until the war is over."

An hour later Esteban and his nurse still had their heads together. They were still talking of golden ingots and pearls from the Caribbean the size of plums when they looked up to see O'Reilly running toward them. He was visibly excited; he waved and shouted at them. He was panting when he arrived.

"News! From Matanzas!" he cried. "Gomez' man has arrived."

Esteban struggled to rise, but Norine restrained him. "Rosa? What does he say? Quick!"

"Good news! She left the Pan de Matanzas with the two negroes. She went into the city before Cobo's raid."

Esteban collapsed limply. He closed his eyes, his face was very white. He crossed himself weakly.

"The letter is definite. It seems they were starving. They obeyed Weyler's bando. They're in Matanzas now."

O'Reilly. "A reconcentrado! In Matanzas! Well, that's good. We have friends there—they'll not let her starve. This makes a new man of me. See! I'm strong again. I'll go to her."

"You'll go?" quickly cried Miss Evans. "You'll go! You're not strong enough. It would be suicide. You, with a price upon your head! Everybody knows you there. Matanzas is virtually a walled city. There's sickness, too—yellow fever, typhus—"

"Exactly. And hunger, also. I suppose no one has taken Rosa in? Those concentration camps aren't nice places for a girl."

"But wait! I have friends in Washington. They're influential. They will cable the American consul to look after her. Anyhow, you mustn't think of returning to Matanzas," Norine faltered; her voice caught unexpectedly and she turned her face away.

O'Reilly nodded shortly. "You're a sick man," he agreed. "There's no need for both of us to go."

Esteban looked up. "Then you—" "Leave at once. The Old Man has given me a commission to General Beancourt, and I'll be on my way in an hour. The moon is young; I must cross the trocha before—"

"That trocha!" Esteban was up on his elbow again. "Be careful there, O'Reilly. They keep a sharp lookout, and it's guarded with barbed wire. Be sure you cut every strand. Yes, and muffle your horse's hoofs, too, in crossing the railroad track. That's how we were detected. Pablo's horse struck a rail, and they fired at the sound. He fell at the first volley, riddled. Oh, I know that trocha!"

"—the trocha!" O'Reilly exclaimed. "At last I've got a chance to do something. God! How long I've waited."

Esteban drew O'Reilly's tense form down and embraced his friend, after the fashion of his people. "She has been waiting, too," he said, huskily. "We Varonas are good waiters. O'Reilly, Rosa will never cease waiting until you come. Tell her for me."

Norine withdrew softly out of earshot. There were a lump in her throat and a pain in her breast. She had acquired a peculiar and affectionate interest in this unhappy girl whom she had never seen, and she had learned to respect O'Reilly's love. The remark that had pulsed in his voice a moment before had stirred her deeply; it awoke a throbbing in her own bosom, for O'Reilly was dear to her. The peaceful, according to all reports, were dying like flies in the prison camps. Norine wondered if there might not be a terrible heart-ache at the end of O'Reilly's quest? Her face was grave and worried when, hearing him speak to her, she turned to take his outstretched hand.

"You will be careful, won't you?" she implored. "And you'll be stout of heart, no matter what occurs?"

He nodded. "It's a long way back here to Cubitas. You may not see or hear from me again."

"I understand." She choked miserably. "You mean you may not come back. Oh, Juanita!"

"Tut, tut! We O'Reillys have more lives than a litter of cats. I mean I may not see you until the war is over and we meet in New York. Well, we've been good pals, and—I'm glad you came to Cuba." His grasp upon her two hands was painful.

"You must go, I know, and I wouldn't try to keep you, but—" Norine faltered, then impulsively she drew him down.

guides, having crossed the trocha more than once, affected to scorn its terrors, and their easy confidence reassured O'Reilly in spite of Esteban's parting admonition.

The American had not dreamed of taking Jacket along, but when he came to announce his departure the boy had flatly refused to be left behind.

Fifty miles of hard riding brought the party to the trocha; they neared it on the second morning after leaving Cubitas, and sought a secluded camping spot. Later in the day Hilario, the old Camagueyan, slipped away to reconnoiter. He returned at twilight, but volunteered no report of what he had discovered. After an insistent cross-examination O'Reilly wrung from him the reluctant admission that everything seemed favorable for a crossing some time that night, and that he had selected a promising point. Beyond that the old man would say nothing.

and kissed him full upon the lips. "For Rosa!" she whispered. Her eyes were shining as she watched him pass swiftly out of sight.

CHAPTER XVI.
The Trocha.

Of all the military measures employed by the Spaniards in their wars against Cuban independence, perhaps the most unique was the trocha—trench or traverse. Martinec Campos during the Ten Years' war built the first trocha just west of the Cubitas mountains where the waist of the island is narrowest. Not until Weyler's time were the two methods of pacification, the trocha and the concentration camp, developed to their fullest extent. Although his trochas hindered the free movement of Cuban troops and his prison camps decimated the peaceful population of several provinces, the Spanish cause gained little. Both trenches and prison camps became Spanish graveyards.

At the line Johnnie O'Reilly set out for Matanzas the war—a war without battle, without victory, without defeat—had settled into a grim contest of endurance. In the east, where the insurgents were practically supreme, there was food of a sort, but beyond the Jacaro-Moron trocha—the old one of Campos' building—the country was sick. Immediately west of it, in that district which the Cubans called La Villas, the land lay dying, while the entire provinces of Matanzas, Habana and Pinar del Rio were practically dead. These three were skeletons, picked bare of flesh by Weyler's hand.

The Jacaro-Moron trocha had been greatly strengthened since Campos' day. It followed the line of the trans-Insular railway. Dotted at every quarter of a mile along the grade were little forts connected by telephone and telegraph lines. Between these fortifications were sentry stations of logs or railroad ties. Eyes were keen, rifles were ready, challenges were sharp, and countersigns were quickly given on the Jacaro-Moron trocha.

In O'Reilly's party there were three men besides himself—the ever-faithful Jacket, a wrinkled old Camagueyan who knew the bridle trails of his province as a fox knows the tracks to his lair, and a silent gaucho from farther west, detailed to accompany the expedition because of his wide acquaintance with the devastated districts. Both into the man's eyes and he looked about him warily.

"I'll tell you, if you'll keep it dark," he said, lowering his voice. "I have a man for swearing. I write 'cuss' words all around. It's great sport. Why they have to hire a man just to follow he around and rub 'em out, but' coming a little closer. 'I'll tell you a secret. I'm four 'damns' ahead of him and I've got 'hell' written all over your back!"

He was calling on the one and only girl.

"William," she said softly, expecting the usual answer—"William, dear, have you any ideas what heaven must be like?"

"Well, I'll tell you darling. Until today I had never given the matter a thought, but now I believe I have a very good idea of what heaven is like."

"Yes?" she murmured, breathlessly. "Tell me what gave you this idea?"

"Well, it's this way," said the dear William softly. "I was listening to a recruiting officer's description of life in the army."

The little Irishman was being examined for admission to the army. He seemed to be all right in every way except one. The doctor said: "You're a little stiff."

Quickly the Irish blood mounted as the applicant replied: "You're a big stiff!"

Nujol Receives Testimony from High Sources

A valuable opinion of Nujol is expressed in the following letter:—

NUJOL LABORATORIES,
STANDARD OIL CO. (New Jersey),
BAYONNE, N. J.

Dear Sirs:—

Nujol is perfect as a soothing agent for catarrh of the stomach and bowels. However, in long standing cases of constipation think it should be administered under a physician's directions as a good many of these cases require a treatment of the liver also.

Yours very truly,
F. S. Rockwell,
Med. Dept. U. S. Army.

Ft. Seward, Alaska,
Nov. 30, 1916.

Regular as Clockwork

MUCH excellent testimony, similar to the foregoing, establishes the reputation of Nujol as a safe and scientific remedy. Thousands now use it rather than harmful pills and sales.

In practically every case of constipation Nujol promptly gives the desired relief, acting as a perfect aid to regular bowel-action. It frees the user from the weakening effects of laxative drugs, and in this way promotes a better condition of health through the entire system. Nujol acts without griping; and relief is obtained without weakening or disagreeable reaction. Nujol is so gentle in its action that the weakest invalid or the smallest child can safely take it. To be "regular as clockwork"—use Nujol.

A journalist visited an insane asylum to get material for an article and was shown over the establishment by one of the inmates, who was so intelligent that it was almost impossible to believe he could be out of his head.
